YEAR PASSES BEFORE WEDDING IS REVEALED

Popular Young Lady Visits in Phoenix, Marries and Says Nothing.

Friends of Miss E. M. Newport, formerly of Tucson, but now of San Diego, will be surprised to learn that the young lady is no longer Miss Newport, but is the wife of O. H. Shade and had been ever since the occasion of her visit to Phoenix over a year ago. The marriage has been kept a secret over a year, only the mother of the bride being aware of the wedding.

The San Diego Tribune of Sunday printed the following regarding the disclosure:

"To be married for more than a year and the fact kept a secret from friends, neighbors and even the girls with whom she comes in contact daily is what Miss O. H. Shade, formerly Miss E. M. Newport, a popular young woman living at 597 Julian avenue, has done.

"And the best part is, that she she wants the affair kept a secret for a month more at least.

"Just why, she doesn't seem to know—at least, the only reason she gives is that it has been kept quiet for a year now, and she doesn't see why in the world it can't be withheld for a month longer.

"Cupid has many funny ideas about married life. In some cases, he is the first to spread the news, in other cases he succeeds in keeping the matter quiet for a while, but sooner or later it leaks out, if not through friends who have been told in confidence, then through the parent.

"Seldom has it been possible for the little god of love to keep such a step in the lives of two persons quiet for a whole year and the news which announced the marriage of Miss Newport to O. H. Shade, more than a year ago, comes as the result of many happy courting days.

"According to reports, the marriage took place in Phoenix, Arizona, more than a year ago. The groom, a Salt Lake business man, was at that time in Phoenix looking after his mining interests in Arizona and New Mexico. The bride, a pretty young woman of perhaps 20 or 21 summers, was visiting in Phoenix at the time and the romantic courtship, which started with an earlier acquaintance, soon ripened into love and marriage.

"Both agreed to keep the affair a secret, but about eight months ago the news was broken to the mother of the bride. She forgave and the two came to the little unpretentious home of the parents to make their home. Mrs. Shade has been with her mother now for about six months and the husband a short time ago went to Los Angeles, where it is said he has engaged in business.

"Mrs. Shade, at present, is employed by G. H. Becker, the Fifth street merchant, and when seen by a Tribune representative this morning admitted that she had been married for more than a year.

"But please don't say anything about it just yet. We have kept it secret for about a year now and I don't care to have the news made public just yet. My husband is at present in Los Angeles and I expect to go up there for a time a week from today. I don't know what business he has taken up in the northern city, but in the last letter I received from him, which came yesterday, he said that he wanted to surprise me and would not say anything about his business affairs until he saw me.

"I don't know just why we kept the matter a secret, but we agreed to it, and while my mother has known all about our marriage in Phoenix, no other of my friends, not even the girls in the store, have an inkling that I am a married woman."

CHARLIE I COMING HERE.

Chimpanzee Circus Performer the Greatest Freak in World's History.

The greatest bicycle rider and acrobat in the world is nothing but a chimpanzee. His name is Charlie the First and he is easily the star of the 400 artists with the Barnum and Bailey Greatest Show on Earth. He seems to have all the divine gifts of man—of course, excepting the power of speech. Darwin said there was a missing link in the chain that connects man with the lower animals. The scientists of today have asked Charlie the First to move up from the foot of his class and take the vacancy.

In 1903 a party of scientists found Charlie the First in the forest that hugs the equator in Africa. He did not run from them, as would be supposed. Instead he walked confidently up to one of the party and offered him an armload of coconuts. When the scientists pushed on the animal followed, first running into the thicket and bringing along with him a crude mattress, woven from bark and moss. Charlie marched with the party for days, seeing the negro servants carrying water and fuel at meal times, he helped them.

As an experiment the scientists placed the animal in the care of the skipper of a tramp steamer, where he learned without coaching to wash dishes and keep the deck clean. On his return to London, eight months later, one of the party, a Dr. Buchanan, took the animal with him and there began to prepare him for an exhibit. The animal learned rapidly. He learned more by his desire to imitate than by being urged to his tasks. The idea of exhibiting Charlie the First with a circus did not occur to the doctor until one day he discovered that the animal could ride his bicycle. Scientists and doctors began to come long distances to see the chimpanzee which had been described as the missing link. Among those to take an interest in the wonderful creature were the King of England, Emperor William and Alfonso of Spain. There was but one opinion—Charlie the First was the missing portion of the Darwinian chain.

The London agent of the Barnum and Bailey circus induced Dr. Buchanan to bring the animal to America, and it will be seen in Phoenix on Monday, September 26, as one of the features with the big show. Everything Charlie the First does proves him more human than animal. He has chosen the clothing and habits of a man. He dines with the use of a full table equipment. He sleeps in a bed and carries a watch. In private life he is amiable and appreciative. He plays on the piano, pitches horseshoes and plays billiards. His keeper is merely the janitor of his little house, for Charlie

POCKET KNIFE OF HISTORIC INTEREST

Silas St. John Has a Wostenholm With a Long Record of Usefulness.

Probably no man in Arizona thinks as much of his pocketknife as Silas St. John, and probably no man has one with a longer or better record, albeit the appearance of it is modest, even to the limit of plainness. It is a very ordinary looking, stag-handled three-bladed knife, though the third blade has been broken since it came into the possession of Mr. St. John in 1894, on the death of its owner, who had previously carried it in his pocket continuously since February, 1849. It has therefore, been in daily use for over sixty-one years, and is still a fairly good knife, even if it is rusty and a bit weak in the spring.

In 1849 soon after the discovery of gold in California, the firm of Howard & Son, at the head of which was J. Tasker Howard, then a well known man in New York, established the first line of passenger steamships between New York and San Francisco, which cut the distance around the Horn in half by transferring their passengers across the isthmus of Panama. The first ship on this line left New York in February of that year. Desiring someone to serve as a general passenger agent who understood the Spanish language and could have charge of the transfer across the isthmus, the company employed John W. Carrington. Carrington was a man of fine education, a well known linguist, something of an elocutionist and reader, and withal a well known newspaper man and writer on the New York Sun.

On the way to the boat in February, 1849, Carrington remembered that he should have a good pocketknife before undertaking this long commission. He therefore dropped into a hardware store on Chatham square and bought one of Wostenholm manufacture, the one Mr. St. John now carries. It is also of interest to know that that same hardware store in which the knife was bought, is still doing business at the old stand. Sometime after that Mr. St. John went to California, returning to New York again in 1857. It was then that he formed the acquaintance of Mr. Carrington at a club which they both frequented, and later they became business partners. Mr. St. John says he never was associated with a finer gentleman or a more satisfactory business partner. During this association Mr. St. John often saw the knife and had its story told to him.

On the death of Carrington in 1894 his son wrote to Mr. St. John, asking him if there was anything among his father's effects that he particularly desired as a memento of their long friendship. He replied that if it was still available he would like to have that old Wostenholm knife. It came to him by return mail and while its cash value is now practically nothing, its value to Mr. St. John through its associations cannot be reckoned in the coin of the realm.

BLOOD STANDS STILL.

Piles Can't Be Cured Until Circulation Is Restored.

It is useless to try to cure piles by operating or use of salves or suppositories—as long as the blood is stagnant in the lower bowel, new tumors will continue to form. Clear the blood—free the circulation. Then piles will leave for good. A successful, scientific, internal remedy is Dr. Leonard's Hem-Roid, sold under guarantee by Lovett Drug Co., Phoenix, Ariz. Hem-Roid does its work thoroughly. $1 for 24 days' treatment. PROPER TIME TO EAT FRUIT.

To obtain the most benefit from the succulent fruits they should be eaten at the end of the chief meal. Bananas are an exception and may be eaten with any meal. They are very acceptable cut in thin slices and eaten en with bread and butter. Stewed fruits often have their virtues wasted through being eaten at the wrong time. Six or eight stewed prunes half an hour before breakfast are beneficial; so are stewed figs or stewed apples eaten before breakfast. Peeled oranges cut into thin slices so that the juice is set free with castor sugar strewn over the slices are not unlike pineapple and form a highly efficacious aid to digestion. Grapes should never be eaten except after the chief meal of the day. Taken when the stomach is comparatively empty they are especially harmful.—Family Doctor.
